Spirituality and faith customs play an important role in many people's lives, and the cultural diversity of Tampa makes it fairly simple to find places to worship and connect with others who share your religious beliefs. Being located in the culturally diverse city of Tampa, USF students also have the option of connecting with religious and spiritual groups in the community surrounding campus.

On campus, Religious and Spiritual Life at USF is an organized network of numerous faith communities that coordinate their efforts to engage interested students in activities and worship. Many of these communities have dedicated meeting space on campus. Additionally, the Serenity Room in the Marshall Student Center offers students a quiet place to prepare themselves and observe their practices in the heart of campus.
